Re Item V

Reasoned statement with regard to novelty, inventive step or industrial applicability; citations and explanations supporting such statement

D2: US-A-5 522 803 (TEISSEN-SIMONY CLAUDE) 4 June 1996 (1996-06-04)

1. Under the explicit provision that claim 1 had been clarified in the respect as detailed under Re Item VIII below, the subject-matter of claim 1 would have fulfil the requirements of the PCT.

The most relevant prior art is disclosed in D2 and comprises an infusion set according to the preamble of claim 1 from which conventional set that of claim 1 would differ in retention devices (4) which are extending from the upper surface of the main surface of the base part (2) and in that the arms comprise means (10) corresponding to the retention devices (4) and suitable for disengagement of the arms from the retention devices by moving the arms laterally inwards and also by moving them laterally outwards, as well as, by moving them upwards away from the base part.

Thus, the connector (0A) can still easily be disconnected from the infusion part (0B) when movement of an arm towards the inward direction, which is normally necessary in the case of a conventional snap fastening mechanism like that shown in D2, is obstructed as the arm can simply be moved into one of the other directions for disengagement.

2. The dependent claims 2-21 define additional features of preferred embodiments of the infusion set according to claim 1. Therefore, their subject-matter would also fulfil the requirements of the PCT.

Re Item VIII

Certain observations on the international application

1. The subject-matter of claim 1 is unclear (Article 6 PCT).

It is not apparent from the wording of claim 1 that the at least two arms (9) should be disengageable from the retention devices (4) also by moving them laterally outwards and moving them upwards away from the base part as argued by the applicant before the IPEA. This functional feature, which is at least implicitly clear and obvious from all the figures, should have been explicitly defined in claim 1 in order to sufficiently distinguish its subject-matter from the otherwise novelty destroying disclosure of D2.
